

Almost all our journals are available online and the Library holds electronic copies of journals both past and present. You can look at ejournals at home and on the University Campus. They are available via the Library catalogue and can also be found through the Discovery Service where you can search for ejournals by subject. Journal articles can be downloaded as PDFs for printing and offline viewing on mobile devices.

Your subject pages have useful suggestions for ejournals relevant to your course. These are useful ways to get started with finding relevant information. If you can't find a journal online, remember to check the Library catalogue to see if we have a print version available. If we don't have an article you need in either print or electronic format then you can request it via the interlibrary loan service.
